Washington County Building Department response to Matt Weber comments from the meeting on September 14, 2020

- Kayda Dean called stating she was moving a single wide in from a different county and got the moving permit from that county but was told she needed a permit in our county as well. She stated that her and her brother were the ones doing this for their mom and it was moved and ready to get hooked up.
- Work was to cease until septic permit was obtained and septic field determined.
- Matt called in after sister Kayda and stated he did this for a living, at SJ construction, and he did not realize they needed a building permit because they were not building anything they were just moving in a trailer. SJ construction is not licensed. Matt is not a landowner in Washington County.
- Travis contacted Hammonds regarding moving the trailer on site without obtaining proper permits and permits were not posted.
- Travis did a site visit on August 5, 2020. During the site visit it did not appear there was ever an existing trailer foundation there before and no notice from the Health Department about an approved septic.
- A possible $2500 fine could have been issues but Travis lowered the fine to $500.
- Washington Co could have pursued moving the trailer off site. Foundation was completed without prior approved location from the Health Department for septic location. No inspection was conducted for the foundation. The County could have pursued to have the piers removed and repoured after inspection.
- Washington County Building Department along with State Building Officials and Structural Engineers established County minimums of pier foundation requirements so the homeowner would not have the expense of getting an Engineer themselves.
- Washington County residence or contractors that receive fines or penalties have the option to correct the violations and have fines removed.
